Art. 309. Oath of Attorney.—Every person admitted to practice law shall, before receiving license, take an oath that he will support the Constitution of the United States and of this State; that he will honestly demean himself in the practice of law, and will discharge his duty to his client of the best of his ability; which oath shall be indorsed upon his license, subscribed by him and attested by the officers administering the same. (Acts 1860, p. 23.—Vernon's Texas Statutes, 1936, p. 106. Snow v. State

Reference was made herein recently to the fact that Judge Harry N. Graves seeks election to a place on the Court of Criminal Appeals bench to which he was appointed in violation of the Constitution of the State of Texas. If that is indeed a fact, then the candidate is asking the people to make a real Judge out of an illegal Judge.

In order that you may be sure in your own mind as to what the facts are in this matter, walk into the office of any Texas lawyer—walk into the office of Judge Harry N. Graves

O'DANIEL SLATE IS DUE FOR DEFEAT

Supporters of W. Lee O'Daniel on the eve of the run-off primary election on Saturday, August 27, were apparently resentful of his indorsement of old line professional politicians against six candidates who were favored in the first primary by the supporters of the Fort Worth business man.

Reports from various voting precincts of the county indicated on Thursday morning that O'Daniel would lose his slate by a vote of approximately two and one half or three to one.

Candidates indorsed by Mr. O'Daniel are as follows: For Lieutenant Governor, Coke Stevenson of Kimble County, for attorney general, Walter Woodul of Harris County, for Associate Justice Supreme Court Richard Critz of Williamson County, for Judge of the Court of Criminal Appeals, Harry N. Graves of Williamson county, for Railroad Commissioner, C .V. Terrell of Wise County, for Commissioner of General Land Office, Bascomb Giles of Travis County.

In his first campaign Mr. O'Daniel stumped the state and won a spec-

Letters From Beautiful Texas

Thousands of letters, telegrams, telephone messages, have been received by Gerald C. Mann, candidate for attorney general, since he failed to receive the official nod of the Governor-elect last week. Mann spent a day in Dallas reading and answering a pile of new pledges of support. The candidate, with Ralph Yarborough and Bob Calvert, former opponents aiding him, jubilantly predicts a Mann landslide August 27 and believes the recent trend of political events has made his election certain

TWO COUNTY RACES ARE TO BE SETTLED

Milam County voters will go to the polls on Saturday, August 27, but not in numbers to compare with the first primary totals. It was expected among political observers here that the vote would not exceed 4000 in the run-off races next Saturday.

In the county there are two contested races, one for representative for the 64th district with Joe A. Slavik of Marak and Reese Turner of Jones Prairie seeking the nomination. The other run-off in the county is between R. A. Devers, incumbent, and Connell Clement of Thorndale for county treasurer.

In precinct eight there is a run-off for constable between Connie Lawson and F. G. Gant, while at Buckholts interest was being shown in run-off for the place of executive committeeman between J. A. Jungmann and Kay Moore the latter being a member of the executive committee.

Chairman Judd G. Davis of the Democratic Executive Committee had made all necessary arrangements to get election returns on Saturday night and it was predicted that returns complete would be in hand around 10 o'clock.

In the first primary W. Lee O'Daniel got a majority over all candidates for governor. His recent indorsement of old line professional politicians has so angered his supporters in this county that his part in the present campaign will not materially affect the results of the voting next Saturday. Generally it was believed that the candidates black listed by O'Daniel would sweep the county.

"The Texans" First Picture Reconstruction Since "Birth of Nation"

The first motion picture epic to deal with the Reconstruction South since D. W. Griffiths made motion picture history with "The Birth of a Nation" back in 1915 is "The Texans," which will open next Sunday at the Cameron Theatre!

Although no period in American history is more filled with color, action and romance than the days following the War Between the States, when a victorious North tried to rule the defeated Southern states as conquered provinces, it has been almost an unploughed field as far as Hollywood is concerned. While the brooding pre-War period has been pictured many times, recently in Artists of all kinds and all who have an act of any nature for these programs are requested to register with Mrs. Slocomb not later than noon September 8. There will be two divisions, children and adults. A first prize of $5 will be given for each division and a second prize of $2.50. The prize list is only tentative. Of special interest is the announced intention of inviting radio broadcasting company and motion picture production scouts to attend the program.

NARCOTIC RAID NETS SIX ARRESTS HERE

About 300 pounds of Mari Juana in raw state and a bushel basket of the cured drug was confiscated on Monday on two farms in eastern Milam county by Deputy Sheriff Clarence McCall and Dan Gunn. With them was a state narcotic officer.

Six Mexicans were arrested on two widely separated farms, one south of Rockdale and the other on the highway a short distance from the city of Rockdale in the direction of Milano. The men taken into custody were Augustine Garcia, Felixana Zapata, Provencio Aldama, arrested south of Rockdale; Lucio Cagarez, Hosea Mondosa and Francisco Martines arrested on the Milano highway.

These men were taken before Justice Leo Harris in Rockdale where they waived examining trial and were released under $500 bond each, a low bail in narcotic cases.

This is the second raid within a month in Milam county with Mexicans arrested for traffic in narcotics. Officers here expressed the belief the Mexicans did not know of the seriousness of producing Mari Juana and pointed out as indication of this that the weed was grown openly and with no apparent intention on the part of the Mexicans to hide their operation.

TEXANS SET FOR VOTE

In a manifesto of political importance voters in a Dallas mass meeting Saturday issued a statement in which they took sharp issue with W. Lee O'Daniel because he indorsed six "professional politicians" in a surprise move after a visit to Governor Allred in Austin. This statement is reproduced for the information of the voters of Milam county and is as follows:

"After having had contact with and communications from thousands of voters who, like ourselves, had implicit faith in the independence and sincerity of W. Lee O'Daniel, call and invite every citizen of Texas who believes our State officials should be independent and sincere, to meet with us," the call said.

"O'Daniel told us, before July 23, that his was a fight of the plain people against the political racketeers, who, for more than a quarter of a century, have perpetuated themselves in our State offices and have become the willing tools of selfish greed and special interests. We believed him, and, like the children of Israel flocked to Moses and then to Joshua, we went to the polls and there, unprecedentedly, nominated him without a

BROOKS LANDSLIDE PREDICTS SPEAKER

Speaking here today in behalf of the candidacy of Pierce Brooks, the plain businessman, who led the race for Lieutenant Governor in the July 23rd primary Jay Hammond of Dallas said:

"The wholehearted endorsements pledging their active support received by Pierce Brooks from Senator G. H. Nelson, George A. Davisson, Jr., Alton M. Mead, and other well known citizens of the State is ample proof of a landslide vote being cast August 27th, for the standard bearer of the people in their fight against the monopolizing special interests of Texas, who are mobolizing their forces in an attempt to tie the hands of our new Governor by placing in office their candidate. But, all their money and political trickery will not stop the people and Pierce Brooks, their candidate for Lieutenant Governor. The people realize that they must go back to the polls August 27th, and complete their job of putting Texas on a good sound business basis, thereby ridding our Capitol of the "Old Line" political disregard of the peoples' rights that is so evident today. The lines are well drawn in the fight between the people and the politician."

SPEAKER HERE TELLS MANN'S LIFE STORY

Citing the record of Walter Woodul whom he deemed a professional politician, Bill Turner of Bridgeport, spoke here for Gerald Mann on Monday afternoon.

He recited Mann's life story as a boy who grew up on the farm and worked in the stores at Sulphur Springs. He said Mann worked his way through college washing dishes and after graduating from S. M. U., attended Harvard Law School where he worked in a factory to pay his way through, and in order to support his wife and two children, during his third year he became pastor of a small New England church. After graduating from Harvard, he came back to Dallas to practice law. "He has engaged in the practice of law and not the practice of politics," said Mr. Turner who stated that Mr. Walter Woodul had held office for twenty-one years.

Mr. Turner said that Walter Woodul voted against submitting the woman's suffrage amendment, a 75c per long ton tax on sulphur, a bill to require lobbyists to register, and a resolution condemning cotton market manipulation.

Mr. Turner said Mann would be a genuine friend of the aged people of Texas and believed in maximum payment of these benefits.

Old Chisholm Trail Map on Display at Herald Office

A hugh map showing the old Chisholm cattle trail from San Antonio to Abilene, Kansas, is on display in a show window of The Herald.

Stanley Swift of the Swift Theatres is showing the map on the eve of the opening here Sunday of the epic film, "The Texans," at the Cameron Theatre.

The map, a photo, is about 5 feet square and shows the route of the old trail. Indian wars are depicted and many forts are shown where soldiers were quartered in the war on the Commanche Indians. The show will run for two days, Sunday and Monday.

Because of the Indian display at The Herald the map was placed here for the public. It will be illuminated at the theatre Saturday.

S. Johnson of Dallas, who has been buying cotton in Cameron for more than ten years during the cotton seasons, arrived Wednesday for the fall cotton season.

His Life Story

Reproduced from

The Dallas News

Mother moved her small family to Kansas in 1895. We went directly to Hutchinson, where Dad Baker met us. There mother and Dad Baker were married by a Christian preacher.

As a 5 year old child I was terribly worried watching the marriage ceremony. Of course I did not understand what it all meant and I got the idea that this big stranger was taking my mother from me. I always worshiped my mother—she was then, and always has been, my angel—and I nearly cried my eyes out.

But I soon learned what a wonderful fellow Dad Baker was and how happy mother, sister Effie and I were to be with him. After the wedding Dad drove us in a fine runabout buggy to his ranch near Arlington, which was only twenty-two miles southwest of Hutchinson.

Kansas with its sunflowers is much like many parts of beautiful Texas. There are broad, gently rolling plains, a fertile soil, not too much rain and a fine climate—generally speaking. Old Mother Nature deals some hard blows, though, from time to time—just as she does to all other parts of the earth's surface. New to us would be droughts and the famous Kansas cyclones, or twisters. But those would come later.

His New Dad Was a Rancher

Dad was as I have said, a tenant farmer and rancher, and the 640 acre place we lived on was owned by the A. B. Crabbs family. The Crabbs were the richest folks in all that part of Reno County. They owned the big general store in Arlington, where we traded on credit, year in and year out. They were also large owners in the bank, the small flour mill and other businesses, as well as owners of a number of other farms and pastures in that part of Kansas.

Although Reno County today is one of the great growing counties of Kansas, it was still pretty much of a cattle country in 1895. Our place was one of those ranches where we raised our own cattle, pasturing them in the summer on more than a section of land and raised feed to carry them through the winter. There was another section of 640 acres of bottom land where we put up the hay for winter use.

Ranching didn't always pay back in Kansas in those days. Dad was about the biggest rancher in those parts. He raised cattle by the hundreds, and hogs also. But often just before we got them ready to ship off to market at Kansas City, the cattle would get blackleg and die. He'd grin and say, "There's one good thing about my hogs—they don't get the blackleg." But the hogs got cholera and then they would die like the cattle.

Dad Lost $5,000 n 17 Years

Dad was never a hand for keeping his books, and I don't think he ever had a settling up with the landlord and the storekeeper in all the years he was a tenant. Generally he came out at the end of each year without losing more than several hundred dollars. After seventeen years as a renter his net total loss on the ranch was about $5,000 so he was to figure it was an unprofitable business and quit it for a small farm of his own. But that was long after we went to live in Kansas.

The first thing I saw when Dad drove us up to ranch headquarters was an amazing thing, a huge pile of freshly shelled corncobs that seemed about twice the size of the house. In Ohio we burned coal, and I didn't know that corncobs were the main fuel in Kansas. Every year until the seven-year long drought hit us some time after—we used this fuel. When the drought burned up our crop, we had to find a new kind of fuel; and anybody who has ever had to pick up as many cow chips as I did then as a kid would never have the nerve to complain over Small House, but to complain over the size of the gas bill nowadays.

Small House, But Huge Barn

The ranch was a thril'ing place for a youngster frsh from town. Dad's place had the smallest house and the largest barn of any ranch I ever saw. The house was so small you would think it impossible to build a smaller one—but we did, later. Then, with two houses we figured we were kind of aristocrats, and lived in the big one. We also had a granary and a windmill.

The barn was enormous. It was always kept painted a bright red, even though the small, four room house missed getting a new coat of paint in many a season.

That barn sticks in my mind because so much of my childhood centers around it. As a little shaver I used to play there for hours, exploring every part from the stalls for the milch cows on the ground floor and the hayloft above to the three cupolas on the peaked shingle roof. It was different from the barns we usually have in Texas. That was due to the fact that it was built for cattle raising and feeding in a much colder c'imate. It was laid out in an L-shape, to break the winter winds, I suppose. Most of the second floor was a haymow which held hundreds of tons of hay and large self-feeders handling hundreds of bushels of corn. The ground floor held a herd of cattle in the cold winter when snow was pi'ed high outside. The ranch hands made their bunks above in the haymow.

Farm Life Was Fascinating

Tons of hay were hauled straight into the barn by wagon teams, and a big, automatic hayfork, driven by horses or mules on a circular treadmill, lifted it above for storage. It took only about two bites by that big fork to empty a wagonload of hay. The two-pronged fork then caught into a little trainlike device and ran on an overhead track to be dumped automatically by remote control. To a kid wathcing all this for the first time, it was a fascinating sight.

But the three cupolas that stuck up about eight feet from the peak of the roof were more exciting. They were about ten feet square and had vents or shutters that let in enough air to keep the hay from going sour or bursting into flames by spontaneous combustion. It was kind of hard to c'imb up into these cupolas, but well worth the trouble. From any of them you could see for miles around, over the pastures or across the fields of growing corn, wheat and other grain crops.

One of the first things I learned in school when I started studying geography was the immense size of Texas and how close it was to Kansas. But I did not know I could prove that fact out in the old red barn—as I will tell you.

Looking Away to Texas!

The cupolas on Dad Baker's barn soon gave me a more lasting lesson in business than in geography. But first came geography.

I was mightily impressed by the big orange space on the map that was Texas. It was bigger even than Kansas and didn't seem so far away on the map. The Panhandle, where they had the largest ranch in the world, the XIT or "Ten Counties in Texas," appeared to be just next door. As a matter of fact, Arlington, Kansas, is only three or four counties northeast of that section of Texas. The Rock Island runs through Arlington on its way to Dalhart and Amarillo. I guess it is only about 150 miles to the Texas State line from where I lived. And climbing up in one of those cupolas, I thought for sure I could see Texas.

I'll admit that 150 miles is pretty far to see, even for a lad with Irish blood in him. Then, it may be my eyesight is not as good as it used to be. But even if Dad Baker just scratched his head and looked away when I told him, some of my pals among the ranch hands acted like they believed me. One of them, a special buddy of mine at the time, was an old cow hand from below Fort Concho. He always claimed he had driven the first cattle up the old Chisholm Trail to the market in Kansas. He told me to stay below while he climbed up in one of the cupolas to see for himself.

He peered for a long time, then he called down, "You're right, Danny. Why, I can see Colonel Goodnight right now, riding a sorrel pony down the middle of the Palo Duro." But by the time I scrambled up to see that sight the famous Texas cattle king had dropped out of view. Mother was always an understanding woman. She just smiled and said, "Well, son, when you grow up to be a man you can go down there and see if Texas looks like what you saw today."

Goes Into Pigeon Raising Business

Those same cupolas gave me my first business experience shortly after we reached Kansas. Hundreds of pigeons made their roost in them, and Dad Baker turned them over to me to raise and sell, if I wanted them. There weren't any fancy strains in the lot, but some of the neighbors and a number of folks in town began buying pigeons from me to start raising them. One of the preachers in Arlington decided to do this. So I took him the prettiest pair I could find. He paid me a quarter in exchange.

A few days later the preacher stopped me in town and asked to buy another pair, because the ones I brought him had flown away on the same night. I went back to the barn and believe it or not, I soon found two more pigeons that looked exactly like the first ones. Remember these birds did not have any metal identifying bands on their legs. I had never heard about any kind of branding for pigeons. As the grower, I was the only person who could tell one from the other. So I took the second pair to the preacher and got my second quarter. And the next night the pigeons flew away again.

The preacher sent for me the third time and said he wanted to make one more try at pigeon raising. I ought to have seen a funny look in his eyes, only I didn't know then that he bad been talking with my folks. He said the first two pairs were the kind he wanted and maybe I could find some more just like them. So I went to the pigeon roost once more and caught a male and a female that filled the bill. The preacher handed me another two bits—then things began popping.

Preacher Checks Up on Young Dealer

It turned out that the preacher had slipped rubber bands on the legs of the second pair of pigeons, and here they were now on the third ones. My folks were ready for me, and, of course, I had to return two-thirds of my profits to the customer. We both learned from that experience. I got such a whaling out in the barn as is not often handed a 6 or 7 year old youngster. For me, it was a lasting lesson in the value of honest dealing. But I've always thought my preacher friend also learned a valuable lesson. That is—always know what you're buiyng and be leery of unbranded products. That's why every sack of flour I've sold has always had the name stamped on it in box-car letters.

Mother always believed in carrying her part of the load and she started in helping Dad right away by making and selling butter and raising chickens to sell eggs and fryers. Dad's own three little girls were some older than my sister and I and were already in school. The money mother earned helped keep the kids in school clothes and supplied with school books.

Short of Cash—Long on Food

The family was always short on cash but we had plenty of good, wholesome food on the ranch—plenty of corn bread, milk, eggs, butter and fresh vegetables from the truck garden that was mother's special interest. We kids usually had to wait for the "second table," especially when the preacher or any company was over for dinner or supper, but there was always plenty. I've never understood why any farm home should ever lack a health-giving diet. A good truck patch, a milch cow or two and eggs and chickens are the cheapest life insurance for any family. The way we were fed possibly accounts for the fact that all of us kids grew up to be healthy and tough folks, and I have lived long enough to be nominated Governor of Texas.

Even before I started to school mother put me to work around the place at a number of chores. First I helped with the chickens. As I grew older I learned harder jobs. In those ten or eleven years on the ranch I think I did every kind of work to be done.

I learned to plow, to plant, cultivate, cut and shuck corn, to mow, rake, stack and haul hay, to harvest wheat, to herd and brand cattle and wean calves, to slop and butcher hogs, to shear mules, to build and fix fences, chop wood, clean out the stables, fertilize fields, mulch potatoes, work in the garden and run irrigation ditches. I also got to be handy at making cider, vinegar and cheese, at canning furit and picking wild plums. The only job I had no use for—but I did it just the same—was milking. There were also some tasks that were really more play for a boy, such as trapping varmints, killing snakes and drowning out prairie dogs that at times almost took our place. I worked at those and a few other things that polite society of today might not understand or appreciate—but all honest work and what I believe should be called a well-rounded education for any American boy.

Homesick for Ohio

In spite of all there was to do and see on the ranch, I got homesick at first to go back to Ohio. I talked about it so much and threatened to go back alone, that one day I went to the barn and hitched old Black Beauty—all our work animals and pets had names—up to a buggy and drove down to the house to get my clothes. The folks just smiled and looked on while I lifted my duds into the buggy. Mother was a little dry-eyed and, I think she was a little worried that I might actually start off. But I was worried, too, all the while I was talking big. What worried me more than anything was how I was going to get across the Mjssissippi River .

But I climbed in the buggy, picked up the reins and started off, after telling the folks good-bye. Mother made a move like she was going to stop me, but Dad Baer whispered something in her ear. And so I drove away—but I guess it was too far a trip for a little boy, just old enough to hitch up a horse and buggy, and before I reached the gate old Black Beauty turned around and went trotting back to the house. The folks had a lot of fun over my trip to Ohio for a long time. The fact is, I have never got back to Malta and Morgan County.

Clanging school bells halted any more plans I might have had to return to Ohio. Because I was now to pass into a strange, new world of teachers and many playmates.

O'Daniel Ticket

tacular majority victory over the entire field in a campaign of ridicule of "professional politicians." A few days after the election, he visited the Texas White House as a guest of Governor Allred and spent a few days in a series of public appearances where for the first time he witnessed the pomp and power of his forthcoming executive position. In a suprrise move which not only dumbfounded but intensely angered the common people of Texas, he indorsed six old line professional politicians against the men who voted for and supported him in the first primary.

His indorsement of the politicians was pleasing to the supporters of those politicians and office holders. This unprecedented about face is Texas' major political development in recent years and has stirred to white heat the controversy over nominations pending, when the voters go to the polls on next Saturday.

In a special poll now being conducted by the great Dallas News, running the life story of W. Lee O'Daniel, out of approximately 25,000 votes reported, it is shown that O'Daniel is losing the state by approximately three to one.

In Milam County advance election summaries clearly indicate that the following candidates will win by a good majority: For Lieutenant Governor, Pierce Brooks of Dallas Count, for Attorney General, Gerald C. Mann of Dallas County, for Associate Justice Supreme Court, W. H. Davidson of Jefferson County, for Judge of Court of Criminal Appeals James A. Stephens of Knox County, Jerry Sadler of Gregg County, and for Railroad Commissioner, G. A. for Commissioner of General Land Office, William H. McDonald of Williamson County.

CRITZ

FOR

Associate Justice of Supreme Court

In 1938 Judge Critz was elected to the unexpired term of Judge William Pierson, deceased, and is now asking election to a first full term. His splendid record commends him to the fullest consideration of the Democratic votes of the State. Not only is he an able jurist, but as a man and as a citizen, his record is above reproach.

To the Voters of Milam County:

When I publicly announced my candidacy for the office of Treasurer of Milam County, in June, 1938, I undertook to identify myself, by stating that I was born in Cameron ,and attended the Cameron High School, where I graduated, and afterwards attended the University of Texas, until I volunteered to join the army during the World War; that after the war, I taught in the public schools of Milam County, and afterwards, served as Deputy Tax Assessor for Precinct 8; that I am a son of Frank J. Clement, who was, for many years, your County Superintendent, and that by training and experience, I am qualified to discharge the duties of this office.

As a result of the July Primary, I was fortunate enough to be in the run-off, and have since been active in seeing as many voters as I possibly could.

I very greatly appreciate the fine vote given me in the general primary, and confidently hope for a majority of the votes in the August Primary.

If the voters of Milam County shall favor me with a majority of votes in the next primary, I promise to give the very best service possible, and to make the best County Treasurer that I am possibly able to make.

Trusting that I may be accorded the privilege of serving you as your County Treasurer, I am

Very truy yours,
CONNELL CLEMENT.

"Turn About Is Fair Play"

To the Editor:

For the past 60 years the American Czech voters of Milam County unreservedly supported their American neighbors for the Legislature and did vote for the best man running. Now, in the spirit of fairness and justice, is it not time, for the entire American voters to return the favor?

We objected to none of our good neighbors on account of race, creed or nationality, and is it not right and just for you American voters to do likewise?

The American voter loves fair play and rebukes all unfair practices, so don't you think that Joe Slavik is as good a man as his honorable opponent and if he is, is it not time for turn about?

Forget race, creed and nationality and vote for the best man and that man is none other than JOE SLAVIK

(Paid for by Czech friends of Joe Slavik.)

CARD OF THANKS

I wish to take this means of expressing my appreciation to my many friends who contributed to the premium made up under direction of the Chamber of Commerce and presented to me in recognition of my ginning the first bale of cotton for the 1938 season in Milam County.

The premium consisted of $33.50 cash and merchandise valued at $20 and I want to thank each one who contributed to this amount.

"Christ Jesus" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon which will be read in all churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, August 28.

The Golden Text is: "Thou, Bethlehem Ephratah, though thou be little among the thousands of Judah, yet out of thee shall he come forth unto me that is to be ruler in Israel, whose goings forth have been from of old, from everlasting" (Micah. 5:2.)

Among the citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Bible; "These twelve Jesus sent forth, and commanded them, saying, . .. Behold, I send you forth as sheep in the midst of wolves: be ye therefore wise as serpents, and harmless as doves" (Matthew 10:5, 16.)

The Lesson-Sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "It is possible,—yea, it is the duty and privilege of every child, man, and woman,—to follow in some degree the example of the Master by the demonstration of Truth and Life, of health and holiness" (page 37.)

of years before Columbus discovered America.

Mr. Cox's lecture was one of the high lights among a number of interesting programs presented by the program committee of the Rotary Club during recent weeks.

The lecture wlil be reproduced in the columns of the Herald in one or two installments beginning next week. Mr. Cox was introduced by Mr. F. G. Blake who was toastmaster for the day having been named to preside by Dr. Clifford Swift, president of the club. Following the luncheon hour, a meeting of the Board of Directors was held and plans made for the visit here on September 14 of the District Governor.

Other business transacted included plans for the luncheon on Wednesday, August 31 at which time each member of the club will bring his competitor in business to be a special guest for the day. This is part of a series of programs giving the spirit of Rotary as it exists among neighbors in business.

John C. Andres, secretary, read a post card greeting from Miss Ida Byrd Mayfield, sweetheart of the club, who is on a vacation trip in Florida.

The Rotary Club plans road signs and will soon move into permanent quarters over the Cato Cafe where a large room has been fitted out for the purpose.

Texans

"Jezebel," and the War itself even more often, "The Texans" is the first epic production in more than twenty years to depict the most thrilling aspect of all, the South's titanic struggle for liberty and self-rule after Appmattox.

In tracing the fortunes of a typical Texas family, beginning with the return of the men from battle in 1865, "The Texans" symbolizes the tragic and moving story of the entire South during the post-bellum years. At the head of the cast, Joan Bennett is a tempestuous Dixie belle, who refuses to submit to Northern rule and insists that the "great cause" is not lost, while Randolph Scott is a homecoming Confederate soldier, who devotes everything to the building up of a new Texas on the ruins of the old. Although Miss Bennett is all for starting a new uprising, Scott convinces her that she should devote her energies to constructive work, and together they lead a great cattle calvacade through the wilds of Texas and Oklahoma into thriving Kansas, where the new railroad provides them with a ready market for their steers.

All the tragedy of the Reconstruction period is revealed as the picture unfolds. A group of the most miserable men ever to appear on the American scene, the carpet-baggers, descend on a prostrate land and rule a proud people for their own profit. Aristocatic families are reduced to poverty, private lives are invaded and even private property is confiscated by corrupt officials who can never get enough loot.

"The Texans" boasts a supporting cast of some of fildom's best-liked players.

day fishing on the Rio Grande River.

From Southfort they motored to Belnorte, Colorado where they spent two days and n ihgtvsisitnigetnioa two days and nights visiting and enjoying the mountainous country. Mr. Alexander said the atmosphere was cool and pleasant.

In Creed, Colorado, they enjoyed another day of fishing on the Continental Divide at the head of the Rio Grande. They spent Wednesday in Delnorte and left early Thursday morning for Salida, then went on to Canyon City.

Of particular interest to the party was the Royal Gorge Canyon over which spans the highest swinging bridge in the world. While in Canyon City, they also visited the Colorado State Penitentiary which now has within its walls 1358 prisoners. The state is at this time repairing and remodeling its buildings using native materials from their own mountains.

They went through Pueblo, and spent the night in Lamar which concluded their visit in Colorado. They arrived in Wichita, Kanas at five o'clock Friday afternoon, August 12, where they attended the National Tournament Ball Game between Wichita, Kansas and Mt. Pleasant, Texas. Mt. Pleasant won with a three to two score in a twelve inning game. They spent Friday night in the home of Dr. L. B. Wilkins.

Early Saturday morning they left for Oklahoma City and arrived in Cameron the night of August 13, thus completing a seven day vacation spent in the mountains and canyons of ocol Colorado.

THINK IT OVER!

There are many people who are not interested in the Churches of our land. As far as they are concerned, there would not need to be any churches so they think, and they try to make themselves believe that. Perhaps they are just trying to find an excuse to ease their conscience for not attending and for not supporting the church. BUT would these same people want to live in a land in which there is no church, where the influence of the church has not bettered life and living conditions? would they really like to live among heathen barbarian surroundings, where civilization is unknown? Only where God's Word, and the Church which teaches it, is unknown, in heathen countries and among heathen peoples, are the blessings of Christianity and civilization unknown. Look at the life and living conditions of the heathen, if you would know what the lack of the Church's influence means to life. It is true that also in socalled Christian, civilized countries like America, there are still many things that are not right and good, but bad and evil: but that is because in our country and other socalled Christian lands, still too many people do not appreciate the Church's work, and will not hearken to the teachings of God's Word; too many are not associated with the Church wholeheartedly and do not really live according to the Word of God. But the truth of Christ's words: "Blessed are they that hear the Word of God and keep it," (that is, live according to it,) are apparent today as when He spoke these words; and the pages of history, past and present, testify to it. Think it over!

himself, if you like—and ask him to show you the 114th volume of the Southwestern Reporter, second series. When you get it, turn to page 898 and read the case of Snow v. State.

Snow had appealed a burglary case to the court in which Judge Graves was sitting as a de facto Judge, along with his de jure brethren on that bench. Snow's conviction was affirmed by the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals, all Judges concurring. Snow then asked for rehearing on the ground that Judge Graves had no right to sit in his case for the reason that he had no right to sit in any case on that bench.

Judicial Knowledge

The Court in that case, Judge Hawkins speaking, declared the extent to which it recognized the uncontested facts as regarded the status of Judge Graves. The second paragraph of the opinion overruling Snow's motion for a rehearing reads:

"We know actually and judicially, (a) that in consequence of the death of the late O. S. Lattimore a vacancy occurred in the office of Judge of this court; (b) that in discharging the duty imposed upon him by the Constitution (Art. V, Sec. 4,) the Governor appointed Judge Graves to fill the vacancy; (c) that Judge Graves holds the commission from the Governor evidencing his appointment to the office; (d) that he has taken the official oath and is now engaged in discharging the duties of said office; (e) that Judge Graves was a member of the House of Representatives of the Forty-Fifth Legislature of the State; (f) that the Legislature of which Judge Gaves was a member passed a law which raised the salaries of the Judges of the appellate courts, including the Judges of the Court of Criminal Appeals; (g) that the term for which Judge Graves was elected to said Forty-Fifth Legislature does not expire until the second Tuesday in January, 1939; (h) that Article 3, Section 18, of the State Constitution provides in part as follows:

"No Senator or Representative shall during the term for which he may be elected, be eligible to any civil office or profit under this State, which shall have been created or the emoluments of which may have been increased during such term."

What the Court Held

Those are the cold facts. Judge Graves doesn't deny them. Nobody does. Applying the law to these facts the court held: (1) That Judge Graves holds office in fact, whether in law or not. (2) That against a de facto Judge the only way to quesion his eligibility is by civil suit brought by one who claims his office or by quo warranto proceedings brought in the name of the State. (3) That the Court of Criminal Appeals is without jurisdiction to hear a suit questioning the eligibility of Judge Graves. (4) That Snow particularly could not bring such a suit collaterally. (5) That Snow was not hurt, even if Judge Graves had no right to affirm the case against Snow, beiause the other two Judges also affirmed, so that Judge Graves' action made no difference in the Snow case, anyhow.

Shall a Judge Obey?

The record, and the record alone is relied upon herein to show in full the ineligibility of Judge Graves to hold the office which he does hold.

In the light of those facts, Judge Graves appears barred from the bench by the Constitution, by his oath to support that Constitution and by the Governor's want of power, under the Constitution, to tender the appointment to any member of the Legislature which increased the emoluments of the post to which Judge Graves was elevated.

If Judge Graves says that as a laywer he believes otherwise, he believes it. But no man with that attitude toward the plain words of the Constitution ought to be entrusted with the guardianship of that Constitution. A Judge sits on the bench and commands obedience to the law. Shall the Judge himself be above the law? Or shall the Judge also obey?

Ginning Prices Cut

Cameron cotton gins are charging the farmers only 20c per hundred for ginning, a full 10c below prices charged last year. Generally the gin owners feel they can not make a profit at this low charge.

Cotton seed was selling for around $24 per ton as a result of strong competition in the market.

Mr. and Mrs. Bill Parma and daughter, Nora Marie attended the band concert in Belton last Friday evening. Mr. Parma is a member of that musical organization.

When you drink Beer in a tavern . . . choose your tavern

WHEN YOU restrict your patronage to legal, respectable retail outlets, you not only encourage those better outlets but you've made a start toward driving out the bad spots in your community.

And that is exactly the aim of the great body of honest retailers of beer who, along with the brewers, recognize that Beer's only problem is to remove the anti-social conditions that sometimes surround its sale.

Existing laws can curb these evils. Help us by demanding their strict enforcement! Sales to minors, or after legal hours . . . or use of a beer license as a screen, for selling illicit liquor or for operating an illicit resort . . . all these are violations of the law and should be stopped. Public opinion, once aroused, can see that such practices are stopped!
